

Business woman, Pastor Damilola Kuteyi buried in Ondo

The body of Pastor (Mrs) Josephine Oluwadamilola Kuteyi has been laid to rest in her country home Ondo amidst wailing and outpour of encomiums by her relatives, the Ondo Community and prominent Nigerians from all walks of life whose lives she touched in her 56 years sojourned on earth.

A special farewell service, which was held at the Oba Adesanoye Civic Centre in Ondo was attended by the Ondo State Governor Dr Olusegun Mimiko and his wife Olukemi, captains of industries and who's who in the nation. The Special Assistant to the General Overseer of the Redeemed Christian Church of God, Pastor Johnson Odesola, in his homily at the service assured that anyone who died in Christ has a legacy and gain in heaven. The cleric, who described death as the only thing that is being shared equally by both the rich and the poor, urged the people to be closer to God so that they can inherit the kingdom of heaven, adding that the late Pastor Kuteyi had done her part to God and humanity.

He admonished the people to re-examine their lives and avoid sin and wickedness which can serve as impediments to their eternal glory. The Ondo State Governor, Dr Olusegun Mimiko, who spoke with newsmen shortly after the interment at the deceased home along Ondo –Akure road, described the deceased as a true child of God who never allowed her chains of business to distract her from the service of God.

He said “She was a passionate woman, a devoted Christian, a very notable entrepreneur, she combined all of these as a good mother, a good Christian an evangelist and at the same time, she was also a very extraordinary businesswoman. She was a philanthropist and one exciting thing about her life is that in spite of all the challenges that business placed on her time, she had time for God.

The children will miss her, the Ondo community will miss her, the church of God will miss her and Nigeria will miss her. Our only consolation is that she lived a worthy life”. Pastor (Mrs) Josephine Oluwadamilola Kuteyi died last week Friday in an helicopter crash in Osun State on her way to Ilorin.